

SPONSORSHIP BROCHURE

WELCOME TO EDRC 2025!

The European Drosophila Research Conference (EDRC) is the most important scientific conference for the European fruit fly research community. It is held every two years in a European city and attracts 700-800 delegates from all over the world. After Barcelona (2013), Heidelberg (2015), London (2017), Lausanne (2019) and Lyon (2023), the 2025 edition will be held in Alicante, Spain.

The EDRC covers all Drosophila research, from evolution and development to neurobiology, immunology, metabolism, and cancer. It acts as an important channel for scientific communication in Europe and has a strong educational mission, as the majority of speakers are selected from abstracts submitted by early career researchers. World-leading Drosophila researchers have already confirmed their participation as plenary speakers. This includes Cassandra Extavour (Harvard University, USA), David Bilder (Berkeley University, USA), Lucia Prieto-Godino (Crick Institute, UK), Ruben Artero (ARTHEX Bio, Spain), Marta Llimargas (IMBM-CSIC, Spain), Tor Erik Rusten (University of Oslo, Norway), Maria Gambetta (University of Lausanne, Switzerland), Romain Levayer (Pasteur Institute, France), Silke Sachse (Max Planck Institute, Germany), Wei Zhang (Peking University, China) and Yulong Li (Peking University, China).

Our goal is to have a conference that presents the latest developments in Drosophila biology and technology.

We hope to see you in Alicante (Spain) from September 25 to 28, 2025!
